

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a U-nut comprising, a substrate including a flex area wherein the substrate and the flex area include a polymer; a first substrate segment, a second substrate segment, and a flex area, wherein the first substrate segment and the second substrate segment are located adjacent to the flex area; a retainer located on the first substrate segment; and an acceptor located on the second substrate segment.